In Munich, it's the mix that makes the message. Old meets new, past meets present and future, the modern blends harmoniously with the traditional, bits and bytes with beer, business and leisure. For the visitor, there is never any shortage of sights to see or activities to engage in.

The Bavarian Metropolis with its 1.5 million inhabitants lies virtually at the centre of Europe. Munich's origin goes back to an early settlement of monks from the Tegernsee Monastery which was called "ad Munichen" (the monks' home).

The situation leading to its later growth was treated by an act of violence of Henry the Lion, Duke of Bavaria from the House of Guelph. At that time the salt transports coming from Reichenhall and Hallein had to go over a bridge spanning the Isar River at Föhring north of Munich. The bridge passage was accompanied by a toll, and this traffic brought considerable revenue to the Bishop of Freising in whose territory Föhring was located. Henry the Lion had this bridge destroyed forcing the salt transports to use his new bridge a few miles upstream in ducal territory. On June 14, 1158, the new bridge, the market, the customs office and the mint at "Munichen" were approved by imperial decree thus in one fell swoop the monastic settlement assumed a completely different function. The rapidly prospering town was selected by the ruling family of the Wittelsbach in the middle of the 13th century as its Residence due to a territorial split and in 1294 it was granted a new municipal charter. During the reign of Emperor Ludwig the Bavarian - of the Wittelsbach family - the city extended its walls six fold and in 1504 it finally became the capital of the reunited Duchy of Bavaria. Under the 700 years of Wittelsbach reign as dukes, electors and kings Munich attained increasingly the reputation of being a European centre of culture.

Year after year, Munich takes gold in German city rankings. When asked where they would prefer to live, most Germans say Munich. The reason is simple: a magic combination of a vigorous economy and top-notch leisure time activities and outstanding cultural offerings.

Welcome back to Munich! Since Pentecost holidays in Munich are finally possible again: Hotels and guesthouses can welcome guests again, museums and galleries are open again, Guided tours are again possible, and the catering trade can again entertain guests inside and outside.

We look forward to seeing you again in Munich!

Please continue to keep a safe distance of at least one and a half metres from other people. In addition, wearing a mouth-and-nose protector on public transport as well as in all shops, museums, galleries, exhibitions, etc. is prohibited. It is also compulsory within the catering trade. Non-observance will be prosecuted under criminal law.

MUCA Museum of Urban and Contemporary Art

Street art as a form of art of the 21st century is rightly considered as a global celebrated phenomenon, nevertheless street art hasn't arrived enough in the art discourse. The newly build Museum of Urban and Contemporary Art (MUCA) wants to make a change by enrolling street art into art history and by building a bridge between the international art scene, artists and the public.

The idea of MUCA is to bring art and its people together to a place of self-reflection, with the main question of what a visionary museum stands for.

Auer Dult - Pottery Market

The Auer Dulten Fairs Traditional fairs held at Mariahilfplatz square in Munich's Au district invite visitors for nine days, three times a year to stroll and look, eat and drink, enjoy and shop. The market has the character of a folk festival and looks back on a long tradition. It was already mentioned in writings from medieval times and is organized by City of Munich. Extending over about 22,000 m² of fairground, the Dult forms an island in the heart of the city where fun and a cozy atmosphere reign. What is probably Europe's largest tableware market, the lanes of merchants and specialist dealers, a Russian wheel and chair o'plane rides as well as many other attractions invite visitors.

There is the May Dult, beginning in the end of April, followed by the Jakobi Dult in the last week of July and the Kirchweih Dult in the middle of October, taking place from October, 16 to October, 24 2021 this year.

DINING

© München Tourismus, Christian Kasper

Perhaps most people associate Munich with beer, and there certainly are a lot of breweries and beer halls in the city. But don't miss Munich's classic high-calorie everyday cooking. Schweinshaxe is a roasted ham hock or "pork knuckle," and it goes well with sauerkraut and Knödel, which are boiled dumplings. We also recommend Apfelstrudel (apple strudel) and custard or a Dampfnudel (a kind of cream bun with chocolate or vanilla custard) for dessert.

Hofbräuhaus

Hofbräuhaus is one of Munich's most famous and popular attractions and the brewery has been a source of inspiration for many song texts.

Paulaner am Nockherberg

Paulaner am Nockherberg is a popular meeting place for Munich locals, no matter where and when - in the beer garden, in the restaurant or during the traditional strong beer festival. The restaurant under the control of Christian Schottenhamel and Florian Lechner opened its doors again after some time of renovation in February 2018. As a new particularity, the beer is now exclusively brewed for Nockherberg's use in brewing kettles situated inside the restaurant in a central room. Also the menu for the restaurant and the beer garden has been revised. It includes Bavarian classics, but also creations of an innovative Bavarian cuisine.

*Compared to the manufacturers' former recommended retail price if there is any.

Dallmayr's or Käfer's, the leading delicatessens in Europe, or at the Victuals Market in the heart of the city. Another typical feature of Munich is the number of small shops that concentrate on a few articles, for example, umbrellas, felt, gloves, candles or wood carvings, and which are still to be found in the centre of town.

Munich's ultra-chic shopping area additionally covers Perusastrasse, Residenzstrasse, Brienner Strasse and Odeonsplatz. You will discover gems in the shop belonging to the Nymphenburg Porcelain factory (Odeonsplatz 1), which has been based in Munich for over 250 years. In the district of purveyors to the court, where not only the Bavarian king was a customer, you can go on a regal shopping expedition - from porcelain, jewellery and select delicacies to high-quality shoes and clothing.

The recently opened "Maximilianshöfe" - Maximilian's court yards - will also carry you off into the world of international design. You can take a break from shopping in the columned hall of the former "Marstall" - the royal stables, as a new restaurant has been established in the classified historical building.

Outside the old town centre, for example in Schwabing, Haidhausen, around the Gärtnerplatz and in the Glockenbach area, the shops - and the customers - are quite obviously more unconventional. The Gärtnerplatz and the Glockenbach district are also ideal shopping areas for gays and lesbians. Shop ateliers, boutiques and concept stores, with many cafés and bars in between that are open during the day, invite you to go shopping, to look and enjoy yourself.

Bargain-hunters are in their element at flea markets and designer outlets, or they amuse themselves in search of curiosities and crockery, junk and antiques at an old Munich institution, the street market-cum-funfair called the Auer Dult (in May, July/August and October).

Electricity

Stadtwerke München (SWM) is firmly rooted in the city of Munich as a regional electricity provider. For more than 100 years, Germany's largest municipal energy supply company has been ensuring a secure, economical and environmentally friendly supply of electricity to Munich.

In comparison to other suppliers, SWM offers a favourable tariff for green electricity. By 2025 they want to produce so much green electricity in their own plants that they can cover the consumption of the whole of Munich. Munich will thus be the first city in the world to reach this goal. This is why SWM is actively promoting the expansion of renewable energy plants.
