A charm lies in its picturesque crescents and white-washed houses - the port city of Bodrum is a year-round travel resort. Nestled in the Western coast of Turkey, on a peninsula, it has developed into "Turkey's St. Tropez", fully living up to the name. Bodrum is significantly more than just sun, sand and sea, and today the town is one of the most important centres of trade, art and entertainment. This charming coastal town is a perfect example of traditional and modern life going along hand in hand in perfect harmony.

THE CITY

Curioso/Shutterstock.com

The name Bodrum has changed many times over the years. The city was initially called Halikarnassus by the satrap Mausollos. After his death - in 352 BC - he was buried in the mausoleum, which is one of the seven wonders of the ancient world.

Halikarnassos eventually became Petronion, which then became Bodrum in Turkish. In the 1920's, Bodrum was so remote that it was used as a place of exile. Perhaps this is why the city attracted artists and bohemians, and in the 1970's, Bodrum developed into "Turkey's St. Tropez," with a busy entertainment and night life. Numerous Turkish celebrities own holiday apartments throughout the city.

The city centre is small and easy to navigate, and most attractions are within walking distance. The city's main street runs parallel with the coast, and the sea is never far away in Bodrum.

Even though Bodrum has developed into a jet-set favorite, it's easy for the "ordinary" tourist to wander through the wonderful nature and find the popular sights in the city and get excited by the sheer abundance of history on display.

DO & SEE

adempercem/Shutterstock.com

Bodrum is an intriguing vacation spot, boasting everything from highly interesting historical sights to beachfront relaxation spots for the sun thirsty. The close proximity to the Aegean sea provides ample opportunities to explore the waters, the reefs and caves, whereas the fascinating ruins of the ancient city of Halikarnassus still enchants travelers with its rich history and magical charm.

Bodrum Amphitheater

A stunning example of the greatness of the ancient city of Halikarnassus (present Bodrum), the amphitheater dates back to the 4th century BC and overlooks the Aegean Sea. This Bodrum landmark, one of the best preserved structures of ancient Halikarnassus is reachable by walk from the city center.

Mausoleum at Halicarnassus

The Mausoleum of Halicarnassus is one of the seven wonders of the ancient world still around. Few know what the mausoleum really looked like, but it is believed that the famous sculptor, Skopas, was responsible for parts of the decoration, but it was certainly extravagant. Today, the visitor can only see the remains of the building's walls, as it was destroyed by earthquakes.

Didyma

You do not need to be interested in ancient ruins to take a trip to an archaeological site. En route, you will experience the countryside and the journey will take you through small towns and villages that you would otherwise miss.

A few kilometers from the holiday resort of Altinkum, in Yenihisar, lies Didyma, a great temple to Apollo. Didyma was a religious site and the oracle there was as famous as the oracle of Delphi. The temple was destroyed by the Persians around 400 BC, and the existing ruins date from Roman times. The remains of 120 columns give an indication of the size of the temple.

Boat Trips

Bodrum harbor is full of gulets – traditional boats – that take visitors on trips along the beautiful coastline. They are comfortable vessels with large rear decks and good cabins. You can choose between day trips or longer ones and the captain is usually the cook. You can also rent a sailing boat with a crew or take a bathing boat to one of the picturesque beaches. There are small shady bays everywhere throughout the peninsula.

Beach Life

The beaches of the Bodrum peninsula are excellent for diving and snorkelling, bathing boats or dolmus can take you to most of them. Bagla (14 km from Bodrum), on the south coast, has fine sandy beaches, but windsurfers usually prefer Gümbet (about 3 km west of Bodrum). On the west coast, you can find good beaches at Akyar, Turgutreis, Gümüşlük and Yalıkavak. These are all small villages with fish restaurants and popular anchorages for sailors. In Karaada bay, there are caves with hot water springs.

DINING

Ufuk ZIVANA/Shutterstock.com

Bathed by the Aegean Sea, Bodrum boasts a culinary history deeply intertwined with fishermen's traditions and a blend of Eastern and Western influences. In addition, the peninsula where the city rises flourishes with a wealth of flora, donating to the local cuisine an extra touch of wild herbs and traditional spices.

The quaint Neyzen Tevfik Street, encloses the port in an abundance of restaurants and bars where to tuck in. Mostly serving traditional Turkish cuisine, they offer a great glimpse into the city's 'gourmand's favorites which normally includes a perfectly spiced main course of meat or fish, and a side of bread which is unavoidable at a Turkish table.

SHOPPING

Dahlia Moustafa/Shutterstock.com

A most-coveted travel-resort, Bodrum sees its face changing and transforming the once remote fishing village into an exclusive destination. Providing more than just awe-inspiring spectacles of its ancient past, the city caters to shopping lovers' desires, lending a much-needed retail counterpoint to all that earnest sightseeing. Bunches of upscale boutiques rise up nearby the luxurious marina, while shopping malls, a relatively young concept in Turkey, pop up sparsely throughout the city.

The sheer abundance of shops might seem satisfying enough, but true bargains lie in its rich market scene, a treasure trove of goods waiting to be discovered. "Pazar", the open market, is where your haggling skills can be tested and it is a quite common establishment in Turkey. Flea markets, clothing pazars or vegetables and fruit stalls - Bodrum is a consumer paradise.
