Forever immortalised as the setting for Don Quixote's misadventures, the beautiful medieval city of Ciudad Real is just a short train journey from Madrid or Seville. Remnants of ancient city walls, churches galore and spectacular cuisine based primarily on cheese, cured meats and wine are but some of the reasons to visit.

THE CITY

Pedro Oliva / Shutterstock.com

Ciudad Real's fascinating history begins in the 13th century, when it was founded by King Alfonso the Wise. Throughout most of its history its diverse population comprised Christians, Muslims and Jews, and these mixed influences are visible still in the city.

Little remains of the four kilometres of walls that once surrounded the city, protected by 130 towers, but remnants of those times can still be found scattered around town, the most notable example being the famous Puerta de Toledo. Looking at a map, the historic centre is still clearly identified, marked by where the walls once stood, and the modern city radiates from that centre. It is a small and walkable area, but it packs a punch when it comes to things to see, with beautiful buildings, pleasant squares and labyrinthine alleyways.

DO & SEE

Ciudad Real is a city of churches and cathedrals, each more impressive than the last. Be sure to also walk through the winding alleys in the historic centre, and marvel at the imposing Puerta de Toledo, a remnant of the ancient city walls.

Iglesia de Santiago

Dating back to the 13th century, the Iglesia de Santiago is the oldest church in Ciudad Real. It was constructed in the Gothic style, but the design shows signs of Romanic and Islamic influences.

DINING

CatchaSnap / Shutterstock.com

The best of Mediterranean cuisine is on offer at Ciudad Real's great selection of restaurants, cafes, and bistros. Meat dishes feature heavily on menus, as do some seafood and a slew of creative fusion dishes. If you're looking for a light snack, tapas bars are ubiquitous and offer small bites on a budget. Of course, no meal would be complete without a bottle of the region's finest wines.

Asador San Huberto

Asador San Huberto boasts a welcoming rustic interior, in which customers can enjoy the creative and varied cuisine on offer from the grill. Options range from lamb and suckling pig to stuffed squid and prawns, among many more.

Airport

The Ciudad Real Central Airport is no longer in operation, so visitors will have to fly into either Madrid-Barajas Airport (MAD) or Sevilla Airport (SVQ). Luckily, with new connections on Spain's high-speed rail, AVE, the ride from Madrid can take as little as 50 minutes (with 15-20 daily departures) and under 2 hours to Sevilla.
