Cambridge is a city oozing with history and tradition at every turn. The cityscape is dominated by the university, with its 31 colleges and their extensive green gardens, known as the "Backs," spread throughout the city. Throngs of students making their way to class or lounging by the banks of the River Cam, books in hand, as punters lazily float by, enhance the academic feeling of this centuries-old centre of scholarship, along with the numerous fascinating museums and cultural events that take place in the city.

THE CITY

Offcaania/Shutterstock.com

The University of Cambridge is said to have been founded by former students of Oxford University who left after a dispute and settled in the small town of Cambridge, determined to start their own centre of learning. The city and university have both been largely shaped by the rivalry with Oxford, Cambridge boasting arguably the more beautiful setting and the more pleasant campus life.

The stunning Gothic architecture of the University's colleges, of which King's, Queen's, Corpus Christi, St. John's and Trinity are perhaps the most breathtaking, are emblematic of the city's design and feel, with vast garden spaces, the riverside Backs, filling the whole city with green vistas and fresh air. Beyond the university buildings, the city centre's narrow winding streets offer the best of a small English city, while maintaining the scholarly vibe that makes Cambridge such a unique and pleasant place to visit.

DO & SEE

Alex Brown/cc by 2.0/Flickr (image cropped)

Cambridge has tons of sights and attractions to offer, from the fascinating Gothic architecture to the numerous museums and yearly events and festivals. But perhaps the greatest joy comes to visitors simply by strolling through the beautiful colleges or punting along the River Cam, taking in the sights, the air of scholarship and the lovely student and city life.

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

Oliver Huitson / Shutterstock.com

The nightlife in Cambridge is never boring. There are many ways to enjoy the city if you want to have a bit of fun. You can spoil yourself at a top-class bar or dance your shoes off at one of the hot city centre night clubs that play different styles of music every night, often hosting live performances from both local and well-known acts.

La Raza

La Raza is a restaurant, cocktail bar and live music venue that offers a variety of wines and cocktails on its drink list. Nights here are full of music and fun with live DJ's playing throughout the week.
