THE CITY

Anna Rehnberg/Kungsbacka Kommun

Kungsbacka, a city known for its beautiful surroundings, culture and commerce. As early as the 13th century, Kungsbacka was a strategically located trading centre. Today, Kungsbacka is one of western Sweden's largest commercial centres and one of the country's fastest growing municipalities.

The centuries' long border wars between Denmark and Sweden have played a significant role in the dramatic history of this part of Sweden. During the Middle Ages, Kungsbacka — situated between two rivers — was surrounded by a deep moat that protected it from attacks. In 1645, after many years of war, this region called Halland became part of Sweden.

Kungsbacka was ravaged by a terrible fire in 1846, leaving only two of its original wooden buildings intact.

The city was redesigned and rebuilt in accordance with the aesthetics of the time. Today, the late 19th century, pastel-colored, wooden buildings imbue the town square with an idyllic charm.

Town walks

From castle to hut. Visit Sweden's only Tudor castle, absorb the history in Äskhult village or stroll among prehistoric menhirs in Fjärås.

Tjolöholm Castle

Tjolöholm Castle is Sweden's leading Art and Crafts property. The castle was built between 1898 and 1904, and is a mixture of 16th century

English architecture combined with all the modern comforts from the turn of the century. Surrounding the castle is a formal garden, which slowly transforms into natural English style parkland. The estate is situated on its own peninsular, and numerous footpaths lead through oak forests and coastal landscapes.

Public tours take place every day during the summer season, and every weekend the rest of the year. Visitors are shown round many of the castle's 36 rooms.

Group tours, in Swedish, English, German or French can be booked year round.
