As well as being a very popular destination for sun worshippers with a love of cocktails and clubbing, this Balearic jewel has a long and rich history, breathtaking landscapes, and an irresistible charm. Mallorca's beaches, however, with their golden sands and crystalline waters, remain the island's biggest draw.

THE ISLAND

holbox/Shutterstock.com

Known for its picturesque beaches, sheltered coves, limestone mountains, charming villages, and Roman and Moorish remains, the largest of the Balearic Islands, Mallorca, boasts scenery that is as diverse as it is ravishing.

Its capital Palma de Mallorca — or simply, Palma — is a vibrant, bustling city, rich in history, culture, and impressive architecture. The imposing La Seu Cathedral is its standout feature.

A mere 20 minutes away, in the mountains to the northwest, is the sensationally beautiful Valldemossa — a village that composer Frederic Chopin once called home. A further 10 minutes away is the village of Deià, the former home of poet Robert Graves.

Southeast of Palma, you can find picturesque fishing idylls and magnificent fjord-like bays near the village of Portopetro. A slice of the West Indies in Mallorca — the vast beach of Es Trenc — lies a few miles to the west.

Head north towards Capdepera to be amazed by the medieval castle built over a crumbled city wall. Golden sandy beaches are flanked by lofty mountains straight out of a fantasy film. The golf courses here gleam, and the sea is its deepest turquoise.

Every corner of this island hides forts, monasteries, beautiful beaches, treasures, myths and legends waiting to be discovered.

DO & SEE

Maridav/Shutterstock.com

There is so much more to do in Mallorca than party and soak up the sun — but be sure to indulge in some of that too. Explore historical and impressive Palma, visit tiny coastal villages and remote mountain monasteries, hike the Serra de Tramuntana, take a dip in any of the picturesque coves surrounding the island, or go wine tasting in the Binissalem Wine Village. Mallorca offers a truly notable variety of sights and activities, and those who take the time to explore this small and very manageable island in depth will be greatly rewarded.

Coves del Drac

Coves del Drac (Cuevas del Drach/Dragon Caves) is a unique network of caves situated in an old fishing village called Porto Cristo, around 65 kilometres from Palma. Go underground and visit this impressive complex boasting thousands upon thousands of stalagmites, stalactites as well as a stunning underground lake.

Guided tours take around one hour and include a boat trip across Lake Martel. At the end of the tour, a classical music concert completes the magical setting.

Sa Dragonera National Park

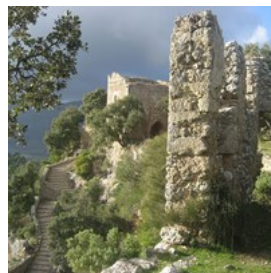

Home to salamanders, geckos, among other lizards, this wild, uninhabited, dragon-shaped islet off the dramatic southwest coast of Mallorca can be reached by ferry from Paguera or, for the adventurous, by kayak! Follow the marked trails to discover this pristine island. The crystal clear waters invite snorkelling.

Castell d'Alaró

Perched on the rocky edge of Mallorca, Castell d'Alaró is one of the island's most rewarding climbs — recommended by lovers of both history and nature. These ruins, a crumbling castle, several arched stone doors, and wall remnants are all that remains of what was once the fortress of 9th-century Christian warriors. Less adventurous visitors may drive to the ascent to take in the stunning views over almost the entire island.

In case you want to stay overnight, Castell d'Alaró also functions as a guesthouse. There's also a small bar and restaurant where you can recharge your batteries and enjoy a meal with fantastic views.

Palma de Mallorca

Fishing nets glisten brightly in Mediterranean blue as they lie out to dry on the quayside. Behind the nets you can catch sight of the stock exchange building, La Lonja, dating from 1388. This place, where locals now sip their coffee, was where most of the Mediterranean area's trade was handled during the Middle Ages. A bustling city, the island's capital never fails to surprise and impress all who visit.

La Seu Cathedral

This imposing 14th-century Gothic cathedral stands tall atop the old Roman and Renaissance city walls, looking out over Palma's harbour and old town. It was built over hundreds of years on the ruins of the mosque that once stood there. Famous Catalan architect Antoni Gaudí had a hand in the restoration project early in the 20th century, though he quit the project over a dispute with the contractor. This beautiful architectural wonder offers breathtaking views in every direction and is the perfect starting point for a walking tour through the city.

Carthusian Monastery of Valldemossa

High mountains and deep valleys frame

Valldemossa, the village where the island's first two "celebrity tourists" — composer Frederic Chopin and authoress George Sand — lived in 1838.

Once here, make sure to visit the village's main attraction: The Carthusian Monastery of Valldemossa. Originally built as a royal palace in 1309 and later converted into a monastery of the Carthusian order, the Carthusian Monastery of Valldemossa is an impressive complex that houses a palace, a church, an old pharmacy, an art collection of some of the greatest modern Spanish and local artists, and the cells where the monks lived for 400 years to find peace and rest. Each cell has its own exit to the garden terrace with blossoming magnolias and a wonderful view over the valley.

Soller

The inhabitants of this idyllic village lived for centuries hidden in a valley behind a huge row of mountains. It was so hard to climb the mountain chain that people preferred to go to Palma by boat. And if they were on a boat anyway, why not go to France? Soller became tri-lingual — Mallorcan, Spanish, and French. In 1911, a tunnel was dug through the mountains so that the people of Soller could finally have better access to their own island. The town's charming little train still runs today. The ride from Palma to Sóller lasts about an hour, and it offers beautiful mountain views.

DINING

As is to be expected, tapas, montaditos, and pintxos abound in Mallorca. But for a truly authentic Mallorquin gastronomic experience, visitors will want to avoid those easy options and go instead for some of the many local specialities. On the coast, bistros serve the freshest seafood with beautiful ocean views, while inland, heartier meals are on the menu — a spit-roast pig with fresh seasonal vegetables grown just a few miles down the road — and the sea-breeze is swapped for mountainous landscapes. All of this, of course, is accompanied by fine local vintages and the warm companionship of local chefs and fellow diners.

Ca n'Eduardo

Mediterranean restaurant specialized in fish, seafood, and paella, which are served on a rooftop deck overlooking the bay of Palma and the Cathedral. BARS & NIGHTLIFE

DisobeyArt/Shutterstock.com

Luxury nightspot or hard rock venue? Palma and Magaluf offer a wide range of bars and nightclubs. But a long night of dancing at a crowded nightclub is where Mallorca's nightlife truly shines. As the night goes on, it's time to prop your eyes open with matchsticks, because in Palma, the really serious nightlife doesn't get going until around 2 am.

Why Not? Cocktail Bar

Why Not? Cocktail Bar is a quaint little bar serving the best cocktails in Palma. Because this is a fairly small bar, it provides you with a 100% tailored experience as well as an opportunity to interact with other travellers. And don't waste your time looking at the menu, simply tell the skilful bartender what you like and let him surprise you.

SHOPPING

Juergen Faelchle/Shutterstock.com

Palma is a great place for shopping. The broad avenues around Plaza España have everything, from local curio shops selling tin soldiers to specialists selling Serrano ham.

Ladies who want to buy clothes, head for the large Corte Inglés. However, more exciting and packed with small boutiques and designer names is the area behind Bar Bosch right opposite the H&M shop in central Palma by Plaza Joan Carlos I. For a more local flavour, the best market is to be found in Sineu on Wednesdays.

El Corte Inglés

Spain's department store colossus is both loved and hated, but successfully performs the main task of a department store, which is to offer most things to most people. Here you find designer fashions, their own low and medium-priced lines, enormous perfumery and make-up departments, leather goods in all price ranges, toys, children's clothes, art materials, food and delicatessen, home furnishing devices and garden furniture. There is a large Corte Inglés department store near Plaza España and a smaller one next to the old city centre on Jaime III.

Porto Pi Centro Comercial

If you want to have everything under one roof, this is the place to go. At Porto Pi Centro Comercial, you can not only shop in stores like Bershka, Guess, H&M, Tommy Hilfiger, Lacoste, Massimo Dutti, and Zara, but you can also play a wide range of games at the Casino de Mallorca or in the arcade. Porto Pi Centro Comercial also offers a great selection of eateries.

Mallorca Fashion Outlet

Only ten minutes north of Palma, you will find this brand outlet — the only one in the Balearic Islands — with shops like Calvin Klein, Guess, Puma, Nike, Vans, among others. If all the shopping leaves you hungry, Mallorca Fashion Outlet also offers plenty of restaurants and cafes, and don't worry if you don't have a car, there are both trains and buses coming here direct from Palma.

Sineu Market

On Wednesdays, the small village of Sineu, located right in the middle of the island, increases its visitor count when this traditional market — the oldest one on Mallorca — is held.

Here you will find countless stalls selling everything you could possibly imagine, from fruits, vegetables and artisan foods to ceramics, leather goods and jewellery to plants, flowers, and live animals, such as chickens, lambs, and piglets. Definitely a must-visit for tourists looking to experience an authentic Mallorquín atmosphere.

Opening hours: Wed 8am-1pm

Inca Market

Every Thursday morning, the town of Inca, on the main road from Palma to Alcudia, hosts a big outdoor market selling everything from fruits and vegetables to soaps and flowers. However, this market is widely known for its leather goods — shoes, bags, and jackets — as its nickname "City of Leather" indicates. So every week, leather merchants from all over the island gather here, making this the place to visit for high-quality leather. Be sure to come early to get the best deals.

TOURIST INFORMATION

G.PAGOMENOS/Shutterstock.com

Passport/Visa

Spain can be visited visa-free for up to 90 days by citizens of Australia, New Zealand, Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, Malaysia, Israel, UAE, and most countries in America. If you are unsure whether or not you need to apply for a visa, we recommend contacting the embassy or consulate in your country. International (non-Schengen) travellers need a passport that is valid for at least 3 months after the end of their intended trip in order to enter the Schengen zone. Citizens of Schengen countries can travel without a passport but must have a valid ID with them during their stay.

Best Time to Visit

Mallorca is undoubtedly a summer destination. June to September have hot beach weather and large crowds of partiers and sun-seekers. If you prefer a more relaxed cultural vacation with smaller crowds or a visit to enjoy the island's natural wonders, visit at any other time of the year (but avoid the rainy months of October and November).

Palma de Mallorca Airport (PMI)

Palma de Mallorca Airport (PMI) is located 8km from the city. Bus number 1 runs to and from the airport and the city centre and takes about 30 minutes. The bus leaves every 15 minutes from the airport and stops right in the heart of the city, at Plaça d'Espanya.

If you would rather take a taxi to your destination, there are cars waiting at assigned taxi areas outside the terminal. A taxi journey to Palma takes about 20 minutes.

Public Transport

There are several different kinds of public transport around the island. You can choose from buses, trains, and public bikes. The bus service on Mallorca is excellent. Depending on how much you plan to travel, there is a selection of different types of tickets, and you can buy these at the Intermodal Station on Plaça d'Espanya in Palma or at tobacconists. Urban Bus number 3 in Palma goes all the way from the industrial area via Palma's town centre to the Illetas beach.

Public transport buses to Valldemossa and other popular villages leave from the bus station behind Plaza España.
