THE CITY

hkhtt hj / Shutterstock.com

Kota Kinabalu, affectionately known as KK in Malaysia, is a fascinating and richly “blessed” city. It is situated on the shores of the South China Sea, and flanked by lush tropical islands and clear blue waters on one side, and Mount Kinabalu on the other. The city is graced by some of the finest sunsets in the world.

Originally named Jesselton, the city was flattened during World War II, and has risen from the ashes to become a thriving and vibrantly colourful city. Much of the city is relatively new, but legacies of its Chinese trading history and colonial past can be found dotted all around town, along with water villages, and an ever-expanding array of commercial and residential developments.

DO & SEE

Sylvia sooyoN / Shutterstock.com

The centre of town is based around the waterfront area, which is home to a charming mix of old and new – trendy bars, restaurants and hotels line the area, but are contrastingly interspersed with traditional markets, fishing ports and hawker stalls, a great blend.

City Mosque

The second main mosque in the city dwells by an impressive and peaceful lakeside. Kota Kinabalu City Mosque at Likas Bay is an extraordinary example of marvelous contemporary architecture, resembling in some ways the design of the Masjid al-Nabawi mosque (The Prophet's Mosque) in Medina, Saudi Arabia.

The prayer room can hold up to 12,000 worshipers at one time and houses three madrasah (religious schools). The man-made lagoon which surrounds it gives it a beautiful and dramatic view on a full moon night.

Monsopiad Cultural Village

Nestled beside the Penampang River are the many traditional buildings that make up the Monsopiad Cultural village, a living museum located 16 km from the KK City Centre. On display are ceramic jars, padi grinders, bamboo items as well as the costume of Bobohizan Inai Bianti, a very senior high priestess. Other interesting exhibits include the massive monolith which invokes a dozen legends, the traditional restaurant and of course Siou Do Mohoing, or the House of Skulls, where all 42 'trophies' of Monsopiad hang from the rafters.

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

Alexander Synaptic (image cropped)

Most of the city's bars are located within reasonable walking distance from one another, making a varied evening out a comfortable option.

The majority of the larger hotels have bars with live bands, although the bulk of the more popular haunts are to be found on the waterfront, and on the side streets opposite this strip.

KK's busy nightlife scene is largely based around late-night fun pubs and bars, which generally have live bands playing until late. There are also a couple of decent nightclubs, and most are located close to one another, so it's easy to find what suits.

Below are the best bars and nightclubs in Kota Kinabalu, Malaysia:

SHOPPING

ymgerman / Shutterstock.com

For handicrafts you will find several small shops in the various shopping malls, but for the best bargains, most authentic goods and the most fun shopping experience - head for the handicraft market, on the seafront by the Filipino market; the place is a virtual labyrinth of craft stalls.

The old Filipino market is also the best tamu (fresh market) in town, and is a great place to buy local produce and seafood.

The biggest shopping centre in town is Centre Point, a huge multi-story centre full of just about everything you could wish for, with electronic goods being a speciality. Further along the main street, you'll find Wisma Merdeka, another multi-story shopping centre with loads of great shops, this is a great place for bargain clothes, and it has the best "Borneo" bookshop in town - Borneo Books.

Dotted between the two major centres you will find loads of small local shops selling everyday products, while the new and expanding Warasan Square and Asia City are great and plush centres to buy brand name goods.

For small souvenirs and budget buys, try the regular night market in Kampung Air, and be prepared to haggle!

Gaya Street Market

Souvenirs, handicrafts, live animals, chicken pieces, potatoes and coconuts. You will find all the ingredients for a "malaysian curry" and more. This is the most interesting market in town with its bustling crowded stalls and lanes. Get there early for beautiful photos in the morning light. Don't forget to haggle the price.

Filipino Market

The market next to the Centre Point Shopping Complex on Jalan Tun Fuad Stephens is known as the Filipino Market, as most of the stalls are run by Filipino immigrants. Lots of Filipino and local handicrafts are sold in the hundreds of cramped stalls and alleyways which are strung by low-slung curtains of shells, baskets and bags. Everything from traditional medicine and toiletries to food.

Kota Kinabalu International Airport

KK airport is located just outside of Tanjung Aru, which is about 10-15 minutes away from the city. There are two terminals: the main KK

International terminal and Terminal 2 (serving low cost carriers as well as full service airlines), both use the same runways, but the terminals are separate.

To get from the terminal to the city you have to take the airport taxi. Vouchers can be collected from the taxi kiosk.

Public Transport

KK is a relatively small city, and the centre is easy to navigate on foot. The only other real transport option is by taxi, and rates are reasonable.

If you are heading to the outlying areas like Tawau, Inanam, Penampang, Luyang, Beverly Hills, a less expensive alternative would be the popular minibuses. However, be aware that they are not air-conditioned.

Taxi

There is no general taxi contact number, as they are plentiful, and all hotels will be able to book one if required.

Destinations like the resort hotels are often fixed and general prices should vary between RM5 to RM10.
